

FLASHLIGHT ROUTS COURT.

Magistrate McQuade was driven off the bench of the Harlem Police Court to-day, when a photographer took a flashlight of 175 prisoners, with their counsel, witnesses, &c. The picture was made to show to the Board of Estimate in the hope of getting relief from over-crowding.

The smoke from the flashlight boomed up to the ceiling, mushroomed and came down around Magistrate McQuade like a pall. He went to his room for ten minutes, while the crowd stayed in court and begged.

There are only eighteen Magistrates to supply the thirteen courts of the city, and they hope Mayor Mitchell will hurry home and appoint two to fill vacancies that have existed since May 1.

LOCKED IN ROOM, BOY STARTS FIRE; BABY IS BURNED

Mother Tries to Jump From Window When She Returns to Find Blaze.

Locked in the tenement home when their mother went to a store this morning, three children of the Lenczak family at No. 650 Fifth Street, second floor, were trapped when one of them in playing with matches set fire to a bed and before help arrived little Josephine, seven-months old, was so badly burned that doctors at Bellevue Hospital say she cannot recover.

Mrs. Anna Lenczak had left Josephine, her infant sister, Stella, two months old, and William, four years old, in the apartment and to prevent the boy from running into the hallway at street level she was at a nearby butcher store she locked the door.

The youngest baby was in a crib, Josephine was asleep in her mother's bed, and the boy was playing about the house. He found a box of matches and lighted them. One burned close to his fingers and he threw it into the air. It landed on the bed where Josephine was asleep and the mattress took fire.

The boy beat and kicked on the door and the noise he made as well as the screaming of his sister brought the tenants of the house into the hallway. Women tried to open the door, but they could not and the fire spread while they waited helplessly outside the door.

Some of the women stood in front of the tenement screaming until Patrolman Timothy Ryan of the Sheriff Street station arrived. He forced the door.

Josephine had crawled to the edge of the bed and had then fallen. Her clothes were afire when the policeman reached her. He beat out the flames with his coat and carried her out. Others had taken care of the baby and William. The fireman arrived a few minutes later and the fire was confined to the bedroom and extinguished.

When Mrs. Lenczak heard the bells of the fire engine and the ambulances she ran to the building. Her child was being carried out when she arrived, and she fought to get into the burning room. She was dragged out, and then she ran into the apartment of a neighbor and tried to throw herself from a window, but was held back by several women.

SIX KILLED, 19 HURT IN AUTO DISASTER

Big Motor Truck Goes Over Embankment and Merry-makers Meet Death.

DALLAS, Tex., June 1.—Six persons were killed and nineteen more or less seriously injured last night when a large passenger auto truck fell over a high embankment about five miles east of Dallas.

The party was returning from an entertainment at an orphan home, east of the city, and the driver ran close to the edge of the road while turning aside to let an automobile pass.

The dead: Faith Culp, fourteen;

Frances Payne, twenty-two; Phoebe Hallinger, seven; Robert Corpening, Roscoe Hamilton, twenty-four; Alex. McKay, twenty-seven.

Outside at South Beach. A man believed to be Leo Siegel was found dying on the shore at South Beach early to-day by Policeman Elwood. The man gasped "I have killed myself" and soon died. Prints in the sand showed where he had been walking to and fro, barefoot. He was fully dressed but for that. A letter arrived to-day addressed to Siegel at his candy booth, but no one was there to receive it. It was from Intervale Avenue, the Bronx.

THE PEACE ZONE.
From the Philadelphia Bulletin.
"You and your wife are always jawing when you are out."
"Yes."
"But you become very loving when you draw near home. I suppose that is for the benefit of us neighbors."
"Yes. No scripping allowed within a three block limit."
